Love under the Lemon Trees (Love and the Jones Sisters Book 1) Belinda Martin

Hannah Jones has been running on the spot her whole life. Tied to her controlling and abusive mother by a web of lies and deceit, Hannah has spent the last forty-two years living in fear of her temper. When her mother dies, Hannah is given the chance to build herself a new life of love and happiness. But first, she must find out who she truly is.

Encouraged by her sister and a passion for art, Hannah joins a local painting class. There she meets Dan – good humoured, kind and gentle and smitten by her. The only problem is, Hannah can't see it.

When the art class goes on their annual painting trip to the beautiful Greek isle of Santorini, Hannah plucks up the courage to go too. There she meets Christos – tall, broodingly handsome with an infectious lust for life. Christos is everything Hannah is not, and yet they embark on an unlikely romance.

Is Christos the man to finally open up the world to Hannah and give her the courage to build a new life for herself? Can there be a future with a man she has known for less than a week, a man whose home is thousands of miles away from hers? And what will it mean for Hannah and Dan?
