How far would you go to save your own life? Would you kill the one you love? I want you to put your hand over your heart. Press down against the skin, meld your fingers into the flesh, and listen to the beats. Can you hear how that one organ is keeping you alive? One pump. Two pumps. Three. Alice White Cabot would consider you lucky. She can press down in that same exact spot and she would feel ... nothing. She is under the curse of the Heartless, and on her nineteenth birthday she will have to rip out the heart of the one she loves or she herself will die. Kallin Grimm is a regular nineteen-year-old guy from the Chicago suburbs. He's completely normal, except for the strength he can't explain. Not to mention, Kallin is in love with a girl that he has never met. The only means of communication between the two of them is through an enchanted journal. Whatever is written in one can be seen in the other. For the past year Allie and Kallin have shared their secrets and their souls, which is why Allie knows they can never be together. It is the only way to keep his heart safe. Enter the dark world of curses, secrets, and a history as old as time. The novel opens on Allie's eighteenth birthday. With one year left, she, along with her best friend Miles set off from California to find out more about the curse, her past, and to stay as far away from Kallin Grimm as she can. Their first lead is in Chicago. Maybe this curse is stronger than she thinks. Tick-Tick-Tick. Who would you choose? Book 1: Heartless Series
