A Lily Among Thorns Lee Lunsford

Leonard Lewis served his country as a soldier in Vietnam. Now, he's ready to retire quietly in the Alaskan mountains. The older he gets, the more he seems like a hermit—that, is until two female hikers stumble upon his cabin in the woods and seek his help. They're beautiful women, so Leonard can't help but oblige.

Lovely Sara and Sally are more than they appear, however; they're actually FBI agents, searching for a missing nuke in the Alaskan wilderness. The more they get to know Leonard, the more they get to thinking he might be a perfect addition to their team. But Leonard is retired, and he has no plans of joining up in the fight against terror.

God works in mysterious ways, though. Leonard begins to fall for one of the FBI agents. He feels protective of her, and he can't help but be concerned for her safety. Maybe he could join up; then he could protect her and see her every day. But is the FBI hiding something? Leonard may be our country's only hope, but he can't save us without God's blessing.
